Speech of Mr. Seward.

SYMPATHY WITH THE IRISH EXILES.

In the United States Senate, Feb. 11.

The Senate having resumed the consideration of the resolution of sympathy with the Irish exiles to which Mr. SHIELDS had moved an amendment, —the pending question being upon a verbal amendment moved by Mr. SEWARD to the amendment.

Mr. Seward said: Mr. President, this proceeding seems to me neither inconsiderate nor unimportant. It is a resolution which must have the assent of both Houses of Congress and the approbation of the President of the United States, and so become a national act. It recommends—I might perhaps say solicits—clemency towards the patriots of Ireland who are suffering imprisonment in a penal colony. It is designed for the information of the British Government, and therefore may and ought to be regarded as an appeal by the United States to the Government of Great Britain. I think this proceeding is defensible upon the grounds of abstract justice and propriety, as well as upon a due consideration of our relations to all the parties concerned.

I begleave to say, in the first place, that it is not altogether novel in its character and principle. The patriots of Ireland who are the subject of this resolution are suffering imprisonment by England on account of an effort, honestly made, to restore their fatherland to liberty and independence. The sympathy which is expressed by this resolution springs from the same source from which that sympathy has sprung which has always been exhibited by the people of the United States toward nations asserting the same right—the same sympathy which was shown by the people of the U. States toward France in 1793, in 1830 and in 1848, toward Greece, toward the rising South American Republics, toward Poland, toward Germany, and toward Hungary. Even in form it approximates to the action of the Congress of the United States in regard to Louis Kossuth, who has been, through their interposition, released from imprisonment in Asia Minor, and brought hither and received and welcomed as the guest of the United States. The interest that is expressed in this resolution for Mr. Smith O'Brien, like that which was expressed toward Louis Kossuth, is not merely personal, but it is the reverential compassion which the people of the United States indulge for a fallen

"Nation in a man comprised."

It is then, the case, not of Mr. Smith O'Brien and his associates, but it is the case of Ireland.

A nation's cause requires a review not merely of the particular accidents and incidents which bring it up before us, but of the whole life of the nation. So our forefathers, in adopting the Declaration of Independence, reviewed our entire colonial experience in vindicating the act of abjuration of the allegiance to the British throne.

Ten centuries ago Ireland was an independent nation, possessing the elements and the forces of national stability. Ireland was guilty of one enduring crime; it was the crime of proximity to England. Ireland labored under one enduring misfortune; it was the misfortune that for many centuries she remained unconquered and unconquerable. The crime provoked the cupidity of England; the misfortune, begetting divisions into sects and clans, favored the invader. At the very moment when the Norman King of England, Henry, the second of that name, I think, was (in the chronicle) "casting in his mind the conquest of the adjacent island," because it seemed commodious for him, and its inhabitants seemed savage and rude, he was appealed to by a deposed Irish prince to re-instate him upon the throne.—The invader enjoyed one vast advantage. England had been successively subjugated by the Romans, the Danes, the Saxons, and the Normans, and in that rough experience she had acquired a discipline which, combined with the energy resulting from a commingling of races and the ambition springing from an insular position, has enabled her almost to "have the world in empire." The invasion, of course, did not result in reinstating the Irish King, nor did it result in the conquest of Ireland; it resulted in only the establishment of a small armed aristocratic colony upon the coast, inclosed with palisades, and therefore called "the Pale." Within the Pale, were Englishmen, English laws, English manners, and English rule.—Without the Pale were the entire nation of Irishmen, with their hereditary prince, and native language, customs and manners.

Acting upon the law of nations, as it was then understood to be, these races regarded each other as natural enemies; and hence ensued war, unsparing and unrelenting. The Reformation burst a new element into this national strife. The Catholic Church in England had given place to one which united its kings and people both. Consideration and prudence, co-operating with proselytism determined the Government of England to subvert the Catholic Church in Ireland. The sword was the missive sent, and a ferocious soldiery were the apostles of the new faith. The Irish preferred their paternal religion to one which was so rudely recommended to them by their enemies. The Pale backed by England, was too feeble to subjugate Ireland; and Ireland, divided and distracted by sects and clans, was too weak to crush the Pale; and so for four hundred years continued an interne war, at the end of which both parties retained their relative positions and power. Thus was all that precious portion of nation's life worse than lost by reason of an imperfect conquest.

At last, 529 years after the first invasion of Henry II, and at the close of the great battle fought on the Banks of the Boyne, Ireland capitulated; and at that time the entire 12,000,000 of tillable acres of the island were divided and parceled out among the invaders, and the few aboriginal natives, Ireland capitulated to the treaty of Limerick, subjecting itself to the government of the Pale, and stipulating and reserving, in the most solemn manner, the Liberty of Conscience. This right of liberty of conscience was not only stimulated by that treaty, but was solemnly guaranteed by William and Mary, the common sovereigns of the United Kingdom. But England persevered in the policy of subverting the Catholic Church.—She changed only the means of accomplishing that object. She perfidiously broke the covenant of peace, though it had been written in blood, and substituted a penal code, disenfranchising the Irish people of all civil and political and social and domestic, as ecclesiastical rights: thus substituting for invading armies the sterner despotism of the law; and she withdrew the sword to replace it with the scaffold. I shall not detail that atrocious code. I am content to give a description of it drawn by Burke, nearly a hundred years ago, and which time has now proved to have been prophetic. "It is," said he, "a system full of coherence and consistency, well digested and well disposed in all its parts, fitted for the impoverishment and degradation of the people, and the debasing, in them, of human nature itself."

"The after history of Ireland is the record of the frequent and generous, but unavailing struggles to cast off that code, and later to redeem the country from its desolating effects.

In the year 1778, Grattan, Burke and Flood, profiting by the enthusiasm awakened throughout the world by the American Revolution, and by the embarrassment which the British Government suffered in consequence of it, succeeded in obtaining from the British Parliament some relaxation of the rigors of that penal code in regard to education and the rights of property; and in the year 1782, when the exigencies of the British Government had become more alarming, they succeeded in obtaining from the British King and Parliament a renunciation of legislative and sovereign power over the kingdom of Ireland; and it was expressed in these solemn and memorable words:

"The rights claimed by the people of Ireland, to be bound only by laws enacted by the his Majesty and the Parliament of that kingdom, are established, and at no time hereafter shall be questioned or questionable."

Ireland exulted for a delirious moment in national independence regained. It was only for a moment, and it was a delirium. Ireland required the repeal of the penal code, and demanded a Constitution. The Parliament of the Pale, constituted by the Protestant population alone, and acting in the interest of England, refused both. Discontent, wide and deep, pervaded the Irish people. Emmet, Fitzgerald and their associates, in 1798, conspired to raise the standard of insurrection; but they were betrayed, and the rebellion was crushed in the germ.

The Government of Great Britain now assumed that the people of Ireland had fully and fairly tried the experiment, and had proved themselves incapable of exercising the franchise of self-government, therefore it was assumed that the people of Ireland were to be governed by Great Britain. The British Parliament, therefore, sent forth to the Parliament of the Pale, the so-called "Act of Union;" and in the year 1800, that mockery of a legislature surrendered its perfidious and pernicious existence.

By the act of union, Ireland, in name was united to the British Government; but was, in fact, absolved, and became a province of the British empire, with only the shadow of the representation of the Protestant minority of the Kingdom.

Daniel O'Connell, a jurist and an advocate of surpassing genius, eloquence, and learning, inferred from the failure of the rebellion of 1798, that the time for martial revolution had passed, at least for the present, conceived the bold purpose of obtaining a change in the Constitution, and a restoration of his country to her place among the nations of the earth, by a scheme of civil agitation keeping always within the restraints of the law, and looking to the end through the ultimate consent of the King and Parliament of England. In the year 1828 he obtained a signal triumph in the passage of the act of "Catholic Emancipation." There remained but one step more from that memorable achievement to the restoration of the independence and freedom of Ireland. That step was the repeal of "the act of union." But the ruin which Burke had predicated as the baleful fruit of the penal code had come on, and pressed too hard upon the feet of the agitators. Ireland could not wait the slow and doubtful result of civil agitation. The nation divided between the parties of "Old Ireland," followed the lead of Daniel O'Connell and his peaceful standard, and "Young Ireland," under the guidance of William Smith O'Brien, and advocating the return to the strategy of arms.

Now, sir, in point of fact, it is possible that even if the Irish people had remained united, neither of these systems could have been successful. But it is certain that when they divided and broke, both systems signally failed. Daniel O'Connell died of a broken heart, on a pilgrimage to Rome; and William Smith O'Brien, the leader of the Irish rebellion, being found without attendants, arms or troops, was arrested, convicted of high treason, sentenced to be executed, and, his sentence being commuted by the Crown, he is now a prisoner in Van Dieman's land. Simultaneously, starvation and pestilence stalked thro' the land. Depopulation acquired a frightful momentum, and continuing ever since, has furnished the last proof that even the most skeptical could require, that never on earth was a revolution more just or more necessary than the revolution which was attempted by Smith O'Brien.

Sir, it is not my object, in this review, to excite prejudices here or elsewhere against England, or against the Protestant church within that Kingdom. I have no such prejudices myself. I disdain to be enlisted by prejudices into a partisanship in regard to historical events. O'Connell was a Catholic: William Smith O'Brien is a Protestant. The rage of sects had died away in the agony of a catastrophe which has involved the people of both sects in a common desolation, and the wisest and best men of England are now brought to regard the decay of Ireland as a presage of the decline of empire.

But it is due to an occasion like this that the truth of history should be spoken, and that Ireland should have her vindication. From me, at least, that debt has been paid. The policy of England was the policy of the age, of the times, and of her system of government; and that is her sufficient apology.

The sympathy of the American people in behalf of Ireland is thus proved to be just. I proceed to remark that that sympathy derives intenseness from the conceded genius and proverbial virtues of the Irish people. The plains of Waterloo and the Heights of Abraham bear witness that they are brave and aggacious in war. Like the Greeks, in their decline they have enchanted the world with their wit, song and eloquence. They are confiding and generous to a fault; while their whole history and tradition, reaching now over a period of a thousand years, exhibits not one instance of aggressive ambition. And not, then, the tribute proposed by this resolution due to such a people? And if so, why shall it not be offered? I am answered, that it is a question for the British Government—that it is Great Britain and not we who are to extend clemency of pardon to these Irish exiles. But men and nations are moved by persuasion; and what is asked here is not the exercise of clemency, but persuasion to be addressed to a power that can exercise it.

I am told that we may lawfully sympathise as individuals, in the misfortunes of these unhappy men and their more unhappy country, but that to us, as a political body, a State, or nation, such sympathy is forbidden. That is equivalent to saying that you may indulge sympathy and generous compassion, but you may never carry it into beneficent action. The sympathy of the individual members of this Congress, and the individual citizens of the United States, will be unavailing if effectually expressed in the only way in which the national will is ever manifested—that is, by the action of the government. And now, Sir, let me say that in my judgment, there is but one code of morality for mankind, and that its obligations bind them equally, whether they be individuals, subjects, citizens, States, or nations.

But I shall be told that we may not intervene in what is a domestic affair of a foreign Government. It is true that we may not intervene in the affairs of any government for unjust purposes; nor can we intervene by force in the affairs of any other government, even for just or benevolent purposes. But this is the whole of the restraint imposed by the law of nations. The law of nations, while it declares that no Government has the absolutest right to deal with its own citizens according to its own laws, independently of any other, yet affords a large scop for the exercise of offices of kindness, benevolence and charity. It is Montesquieu who says that "the law of nations is founded upon this principle—that every nation is bound in time of peace to do every other nation all the good it possibly can, and in time of war the least evil that it possibly can, consistently with its own true interest." It is upon this humane principle that diplomatic intercourse is established, and that all the civilized nations of the earth are regarded by the law of nations as constituting one great commonwealth.

I shall be told, however, that if we adopt this resolution it will furnish a precedent for mischievous intervention by ourselves in the affairs of other governments, or by other governments in our affairs hereafter, however innocent this act may now be in itself. To admit this argument is to admit a distrust of ourselves. We certainly do not distrust our own justice; we do not distrust our own wisdom, and we shall therefore be able to guard against any abuse of this precedent hereafter. Let us now be generous instead of egotistical, and believe that neither wisdom nor justice will die with those who occupy these places now, and that our successors will be as wise and just as we are. So far as regards the abuse of this precedent by foreign States, I can only say that if they ask of us only what we now propose to ask of them, and no more, we can raise no objection to it, and can have no ground of complaint.—If they ask more, then we shall be free to refuse what shall be thus demanded, as the British government is now free to reject our proposition.

The subject demands a review of the relations of the parties concerned. The people of Ireland are affiliated to us as well as to the people of Great Britain. Surely there can be no offense given by a younger member of the family in offering mediation between elder brothers of the same family upon a point of difference between them. But what if Great Britain should take offence at this suggestion? What then? We shall be in the right, and she in the wrong. The time has gone by when this country is to be alarmed by fear of war for offence thus given. No one will confess that he indulges any such apprehensions.

But if Great Britain will not take offense. She knows that her greatness and her fame are well assured. She has no motive whatever to affect wounded sensibilities. She will receive this suggestion in the same spirit of kindness in which it is made. Nor will she refuse this boon. Great Britain knows as well as we do that riger, protracted beyond the necessity prescribed by the safety of State, reacts. She knows full well that, for the present at least, coalition keeps her foundly in Ireland, and that the granting of this request will protract its slumbers. She will be thankful to us for the manifestation of our confidence in her generosity: for her motto is "Parcere subjectis et debellare superbos."

While, sir, it seems to me thus certain that we may with propriety and success make this appeal to Great Britain, the circumstances in which we stand in regard to Ireland render the duty to make it imperative. But if the instruction or the example of the United States, Ireland would never have attempted rebellion in '98, nor would William Smith O'Brien have been an exile now. If it had not been for that example, Ireland would have sunk into the slumbers of bondage that knows no waking, long ago. Again; the failure of Smith O'Brien and his associates results from the exhaustion of Ireland. The wealth and strength she has lost have come over to us, and have contributed largely to the wealth, greatness, and power we now enjoy. If we had not drawn any political and physical means of self-defence and resistance from Ireland during the last sixty years, she would have been enabled to maintain a successful rebellion. When O'Connell gathered the petitioners upon the hill of Clare, he found that Ireland was deserted by the vigorous, the young, and the strong, and that he was surrounded by only the aged, the poor, and the spiritless.

It is these reflections upon the propriety of the act itself, and upon the relations in which we stand towards the parties to it, that persuade my vote in favor of this resolution. I have suggested to the consideration of the honorable Senator from Illinois, Mr. Shields, some verbal amendments which seem to me to be calculated to improve and perfect the resolution, in accordance with the wish that he has himself expressed.—Their design is to guard more securely the dignity of this Congress and the Government of the United States; for, in such a case, I would not be impertinently bold nor weakly timorous. If rightly conceived, they will have that effect. But I am not tenacious of them.

I shall not press them against the wishes of the honorable Senator. If they shall be adopted, the resolution shall have my vote. If they shall not be adopted, the resolution will still have my vote—the resolution as originally introduced.—The resolution instructing the Executive of the United States to make this appeal to the Government of Great Britain directly, would have received my vote. It shall equally have my support in the more moderate form which it has assumed, out of deference to the wishes of other Senators.

And when this resolution in any shape shall have been passed, there can be but one wish of mine in regard to the subject, which the Congress of the United States would have the power to gratify. That wish would be that he who is now entitled to be considered the mover of the resolution—the honorable Senator from Illinois (Mr. Shields) should be made the bearer of this application to the "Sovereign Queen," in whose will and pleasure it would rest to grant it. It is the remembrance of a scene in one of the oldest and best of the English poems that suggests this wish. Sir, it would be a goodly and a gracious sight to see that honorable Senator returning to his native land, after his chivalrous but yet modest career here among us, the bearer of a proclamation of amnesty from the sovereign of his native country to its defenders, thus obtained; and I should rejoice to see his greeting by his countrymen, and to hear them

"Shouting and clapping all their hands on high,
That all the ayre it filld, and fyres to Heavens bright."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Washington's Birthnight Ball.

The Ball given at Gardiner's and Odd Fellows' Hall, on Monday evening, in honor of our guests from Madison, was altogether one of the largest and most brilliant festivals we have ever seen in our city. The attendance was very numerous; the ladies, particularly, turning out in great force and looking their best. A large and excellent band of music, led by HESS AND SCHLOSMILCH, filled the Hall with their inspiriting strains, while Professor BAILEY conducted his numerous troops through the mystic mazes of the dance, with the skill and precision of a veteran commander. At midnight the assembled company were summoned to an elegant supper, provided by GOFF, and served up in the two large apartments below the Ball Room. Nearly an hour was spent in discussing the substantials and delicacies with which the tables were furnished forth, and then dancing was resumed with a spirit which did not seem to flag till

Night's candles were burnt out and jocund day
Stood tiptoe on the misty mountains tops.

The Members of the Legislature and other invited guests took a very active part in the performances, and many of them distinguished themselves as "Floor Members." It is but fair to say, however, that they had high authority and example for this in the persons of the Secretary of State and Speaker of the Assembly, who really appeared to enjoy themselves as much as if they had been in the discharge of their proper official functions at the Capitol. The festival will be long remembered, by those of our citizens who attended it, as one of the most successful and agreeable parties ever given in Milwaukee. It will too, we trust, linger pleasantly in the recollections of our friends from Madison, and help to strengthen and brighten the chain of social, political and business sympathy which ought to bind, in indissoluble bonds, the Capitol and the Commercial Emporium of Wisconsin.

CIRCUIT COURT.

TUESDAY, Feb. 24th.

At 11 o'clock this morning, the prisoner, Wm. B. Radcliffe, was brought into Court for trial. The public importance of this trial, as well as the powerful array of legal talent engaged to conduct it, had attracted a large assemblage of people to the Court Room, at a very early hour. The prisoner, who is a man about 35 years of age, and somewhat wan from his long confinement, showed no trepidation in his manner, and one would not judge from his outward appearance, that he could deliberately take the life of a fellow man. His Counsel are Jonathan E. Arnold, Esq., and A. D. Smith, Esq. The District Attorney is assisted on behalf of the State, by E. G. Ryan, Esq. After consuming a few minutes in settling upon the manner in which the preliminary examination of the jurors should be conducted, the somewhat tedious proceeding of calling jurors and catechizing them as to their competency and bias, commenced.

The first two called, were rejected on the ground of bias.

Wm. A. Ross, a farmer, was then called, and accepted. Wm. H. Smith, a renovator, next called, also proved acceptable. William Lynch, next called, was rejected, on the ground of being an unnaturalized foreigner. Fred'k Waidner, John Bannuley, and P. S. Conover, were next called, and rejected for prejudice. A. Phillip, next called, being an unnaturalized foreigner, was rejected. Charles Brandeker and Robert Gunyon, next called, were rejected for prejudice. James Shaughnessy, next called, had formed an opinion. Michael Dyer next called, and challenged by prisoner's counsel. Philip Daily next called, stood aside for bias. Oliver Damon, farmer, from Wauwatosa, next called, accepted and sworn. John Schrink, next called, was rejected for prejudice Sigismun Schmittel, next called, and ruled out, as an unnaturalized foreigner. Peter Gabell, next called, was challenged by prisoner's counsel. Thomas McKenny, next called, was not a citizen. Michael Page was next called, and rejected for bias. Bryan Coughlin and George Hahn, next called, were rejected for same reason. George R. Crane, next called, was not a citizen.

There being twelve jurors out in a civil case, the regular panel was here exhausted; and after summoning a few persons from the by-standers, a new venire was issued to the County at large, returnable at the opening of the Court in the afternoon.

David Knal, summoned from the by-standers, was rejected for prejudice. Alphus Buttles, next summoned, was challenged by prisoner's counsel. Robert Wasson, next summoned, had disqualifying scruples in regard to capital punishment. Rudolph Katte, next called, was not a citizen. Thomas O'Roork, next called, was biassed. Harvey N. Woodworth, of this city, next called, was accepted and sworn. Michael Finnigan, next called, was challenged by prisoner's counsel. John B. Juneau, next called, was also challenged by do. Francis Wright, next called, and challenged by do. Wm. Ryndhadt, next called, was objected to on the ground of bias, and his incompetency submitted to the last two accepted jurors, as triers, who found against his competency.

Court here adjourned till afternoon.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Court convened at 3 o'clock this afternoon, to resume the trial of Radcliffe.

A. D. Smith, Esq., suggested to the Court the inconvenience and risk of continuing a trial of so much public interest, and which was so largely attended, in the Court House, and desired that safer and more commodious quarters might be obtained.

The suggestion was favorably received, and will probably be speedily acted upon.

The Venire issued in the morning, having been returned, Alanson Sweet, warehouseman, was called, accepted and sworn. Robert Bade, next called, was not a citizen. Mr. Lane, next called, was challenged by prosecution. Hiram Mabbett, farmer, next called, was accepted and sworn. William Wilson, saddler, next called, was accepted and sworn.

Dixon S. Pollett, next called, was rejected for bias. Lyman Flusky, next called, was rejected for the same reason. John McCafferty next called, had formed an opinion. Patrick Hackett, next called, was challenged by defence. Joseph James, next called, had formed an opinion. John Lane, next called, had formed an opinion. John Sullivan, next called, was challenged by defence. Edward Daily, next called, was challenged by defence. John Tobin, next called, was accepted and sworn. Joseph Dibley, next called, was challenged by prosecution. David Lemonier, next called, was accepted and sworn. John T. Smith, next called, was rejected on account of scruples in regard to capital punishment. John Hughes, next called, was not a citizen. Patrick Kelly, next called, was challenged by defence. At this stage, the Court adjourned until morning.

Patrick McDonald, Bridget McDonald, and James Connaughty, were brought into Court to answer to an indictment for the Murder of John Gullen, and after pleading Not Guilty, were remanded back to jail.

John Connaughty and Michael Gerry, were also arraigned on an indictment for larceny, and pleading guilty, were sentenced to be imprisoned in the County Jail for the term of three months.

They were all remanded to jail to await their trials, having respectively put in pleas of not guilty.

The jury, in the case of Lord vs. Hutchinson et al, the suit having been withdrawn as to all the parties, except Asahel H. Finch and William P. Lynde, returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff of $2,165.

Police Court.

FEBRUARY 24th, 1852.

Justice Charles Bode, issued a warrant yesterday, for the arrest of Carl Eisfeld and John George, Watchmen in the 4th Ward, on a complaint of Carl Lehr, charging them with having assaulted a young man, by the name of Stephen Ward, on last Sunday night. The defendants were arrested by Deputy City Marshal Neuman. Stephen Ward, it is stated, was running down Spring Street, to call a physician to attend on Mohr, the man who was attacked the same evening and was lying dangerously wounded in the house of Mr. Hook, on Spring Street Hill. The Watchmen are said to have made rather deep impressions of their authority upon Ward's head, believing him to have been concerned in the assault upon Mohr. They had the wrong pig by the ear.

The trial of John Volkmer, came off yesterday in the afternoon, charged with having committed an assault upon the wife of John Kummer. The Jury brought in a verdict of Not Guilty. The developements upon the trial were rather rich "for such a small affair," and should never have been brought into a Court of Justice it was everything but excitable to the Complainant.

Officer Chas. Neumann, arrested last evening, a man on Chesnut-st; being moved by the mysterious spirits of Brandy or Whiskey, he was knocking about on the sidewalk, and advocated higher law principles. The officer conducted him to Jail, however, on common law principles for a breach of the peace.

Sebastian Jabet, one of the prisoners arrested for assaulting Mohr, on last Sunday evening, with intent to kill, was bailed, and recognized in the sum of one thousand dollars, with sufficient securities.

Messrs. Editors:—

I see by Tuesday morning's Commercial that the editor is rather hard upon you, for that letter you addressed to yourself, and calling yourself "A True Democrat." (I, sir, agree with the Commercial, that if it was a truth it would amount to a piece of impudence on your part.) But as I am the cause of your trouble, I will, by your permission, say a few words in answer to the Commercial's query about the why "A True Democrat should at every ELECTION find his way into a Whig paper"—that is the rub always before election. Well, Mr. Editor, it is rather too bad, on the part of "A True Democrat" to take the liberty to think and act according to the dictates of his own conscience, without license to do so. I believe, sir, that a good many—and I heartily wish that all the True Democrats would come out from the sham Democracy of the Commercial's school, and pick out good men and true, and elect them and show them that it is their duty to perform their political duties. A word as to the why I have chosen "a Whig paper," rather than the papers stating themselves Democratic. I, sir, maintain that those papers that pretend to be the expounders of Democratic principles, are anything but advocating those principles—and they loose sight of the progressive principles of the Democracy. For the information of the Commercial I will tell the reason why I choose the Sentinel for the medium, by which I wish to call the attention of my fellow-citizens to the performance of their political duties, it is, that I deem the Sentinel more Democratic than those papers that profess to be the Leaders in the Democratic ranks. I profess to be "A True Democrat" from principle and do not tolerate expediency; as far as I can judge, I believe the Whig party of this State to be more Democratic, more honest and more honorable than those that assume the name of Democrats. I like the Governor of this State—I voted for him—I should like much if the House and Senate of this State were of the same stamp; I believe much good would accrue to the State if we had such men in our Legislature; I wish we had in the Senate, as good men as the four Whigs from this City; I look at the majority in the Senate as clonking the corruption of the previous so-called Democratic Government of this State. Whether some of the Patriotic members of the Senate had any hand in those doings, they are determined not to let the people know, by voting against all inquiry with regard to the ticket at the forthcoming election. I shall vote for those men I THINK the most honorable and honest, and I will enquire into their previous character. Let the editor of the Sentinel do as he pleases.

Yours with respect,

"A TRUE DEMOCRAT."

FIRE.—At 15 minutes before 5 o'clock this morning, a fire was discovered issuing out of the first story of the Dry Good Store of E. P. MAYNARD, No. 159 East Water-st, nearly opposite the Bank. The alarm was soon given. The engines were on the ground in a few minutes, and by the well directed energies of the firemen, the fire was soon stifled and confined to the building, the inside of which it burnt completely out. Nothing whatever was saved. Not even Mr. Maynard's books &c.

The building was owned by Mr. HARD, of Otsego, N. Y. Insured in Merchants' Mutual of Milwaukee for $2000. Mr. Maynard's Dry Goods and Grocery stock on hand, at the time of the fire, is estimated at $12,000; insured for $3000—$5000 in the Ætna Insurance Co., and $3000 in the North Western Insurance Co. The fire is supposed to have originated around the stove.

Mr. BLAIR (a Crockery establishment,) occupied the store on the right. Fortunately, he did not remove anything, so his damage is trifling. On the left, some of the Groceries were removed from Bradford's extensive establishment, and of course some damage was caused by water and removal.

We understand that the Boston Belting Company had $3000 of India Rubber Belting stored in the lofts of Mr. Maynard's store—all of which was destroyed. No insurance here, but perhaps some in Boston.

☞ The New Haven Courier of the 9th says that during the funeral ceremonies of the late Mr. HENRY WARD, of that city, on Friday last, it was observed that his countenance had changed color his cheeks become red, and drops of perspiration stood on his forehead. The burial was of course delayed, and a number of physicians examined the body, and came to the conclusion that life was extinct, and a subsequent time was appointed for the ceremonies, which took place Sunday afternoon.

AMERICAN ART UNION.—The New York Evening Post says, it gives us pleasure to learn that the American Art Union is receiving from its friends throughout the country, a support which promises to complete the list of subscribers at an early day. The distribution has been positively fixed for the 30th March. Its subscribers of former years should now enter their names promptly, and thus ensure its permanent prosperity.

ERIE RAILROAD. One hundred miles of double track have been contracted for by the Directors of the Erie Railroad, to extend from Elmira to Great Bend, and include about twenty-five miles in Orange County. The contractors take stock for this work at par, and, it is understood, are not to put it in market under two years.

☞ The Time Tables between Buffalo and New York, it is said, will be 19 hours after the direct road from Syracuse to Rochester is completed. To Albany in 12 hours, and from Albany to New York in five.

☞ We are pained to be obliged to record the death of our much esteemed friend, Matthew Woods, late Sheriff of this county. Mr. W., died at Virgin Bay, on his way, to California. But a short time has elapsed since he left this county for the Land of Gold, full joyous anticipations for the future, but a treacherous and sickly climate has off as warm hearted a man as we ever knew.—Platville American.

The Maine Liquor Law.

There is great excitement in some quarters, in relation to the passage by our State Legislature of the "Maine Liquor Law," which is now before that body. As is usual with per-one acting under the stimulus of excited feelings, all the vast pecuniary interests involved in this question, are entirely disregarded or over-looked by the advocates of this "Law," in the pursuit of their favorite theory of reformation.

The prohibition by law of the manufacture of any article of merchandize which has heretofore been lawfully carried on, and thus rendering valueless all the property invested in the business, is a stroke at the dearest rights of the citizen, and one which might be regarded as a precedent for almost any encroachment upon the inviolability of property.

It will be found impossible to prevent a contraband traffic in liquors, from our neighboring States into our own: and thus the manufacture of this article will be encouraged in those States while it is prohibited in our own, and manufactures there clothed while ours are not only deprived of the legitimate profits of their business, but ruined from the utter destruction of their property.

But a small portion of the fermented and distilled liquors manufactured in the State of New York is consumed within its limits: much the greater quantity being distributed by the commerce of our metropolis to other States and other countries of the world. A prohibition of this trade would be an inconceivable damage to our commerce, as it would not only deprive our merchants of the profits of the traffic in this article, and throw these profits into the hands of other merchants, of other cities, our rivals, but we should find that merchants from various parts of the Union, being obliged to visit those rival cities for a part of their goods, would complete their purchases in those places, and refrain altogether from visiting the city of New York. Our dry goods merchants and every other department of trade would suffer in consequence. In this manner our prosperity will be undermined, and a great depreciation take place in the real estate of our city.

It is not to the merchant and manufacturer alone that this question possesses great interest. It addresses itself with equal force to the farmers of the State.

The quantity of grain manufactured into various kinds of liquors, in the State of New York, is not less than four millions of bushels annually. And if by act of Legislature all this liquor is to be made in other States, the farmers of other States will grow the grain, and ours will lose the home cash market for that article, which they have heretofore enjoyed.

A great depreciation would certainly take place in the market value of corn, rye and barley: and those cargoes which reach this city in a damaged condition would be almost worthless. It is a fact, perhaps not generally known, that three-fourths of all the corn which comes forward during the summer and autumn is in a damaged state, and only fit for distilling. This grain would be of little value for other purposes. The consequence would be, that Western grain could not come to this market; it would seek one where it could be sold for purposes to which it is adapted. Our State would lose the tolls of this grain on the Canals, our boatmen would lose their freights, and our receiving the commission for selling it.

The crop of barley in this State is one of great importance to the farmer. This crop is entirely consumed in the manufacture of liquors. If this "Law" passes the Legislature, and is enforced, there will not be a bushel of barley sold in the State, and our farmers can bid adieu to this source of profit for the future: an adieu, Mr. Editor, which they will make with muttered imprecations upon the heads of the Legislature who enacted this "Law."

The thousands of bushels of rye which annually come to market, are consumed in this manufacture. Pass the "Maine Law" and rye will have very little market value here. This grain is grown in the poorer parts of the State, where wheat will not flourish: and is frequently almost the only grain which the farmer has for market. Judge of his feelings when this resource is destroyed.

The growing of hops has become a great interest in this State, and is one of the most profitable branches of agriculture. This is also to be made a sacrifice, as the entire crop is consumed in the prohibited manufacture. Every man can satisfy himself with the grower of rye and barley, and they with the planter of Indian corn, and they will all go up to the poll together.

But we are told "they have tried the "law" in Maine, and it works well there." And they expect this to silence all opposition. How well it works there, time will determine. However, that has nothing to do with the operation of the "law" here. Maine has no commerce, almost no manufacture of this article, and cannot raise sufficient grain to feed her own population. So that all the arguments which apply with the greatest force to us, are not applicable to them: and the vast interests, which would assuredly defeat the successful operation of the "law" here, do not exist in the State of Maine. A LOOKER ON.

—N. Y. Express.

THE LOST CHILD.

This trial commenced on Thursday of last week and continued from day to day, with evening sessions, till Wednesday afternoon of this week, making just one week.

The interest and excitement it produced, and continues to produce, has not been equalled by any thing of the kind within our experience. The court was held in the Methodist Church, which was crowded to its utmost capacity all the time.

It was proved positively, certain, and beyond a doubt that the child is Caspar Partridge, and the lost son of Mr and Mrs. Partridge: and it was strengthened with any amount of corroborative circumstantial evidence.

It was also proved on the other hand, just as positively and certain that it is the Indian woman Nah-kou's child.

The court is adjourned to 9 A. M. to-morrow, when the case will be argued.

The most intense excitement has prevailed, and to such an extent that every variety of story has been circulated about the court, counsel on both sides, and the officers having the matter in charge, being bought over and corrupted. In relation to this, we feel it right to give a speech of Mr. Court-Commissioner Buttrick, just at the close of the session on one day of the trial.

I wish to say a few words. It has been intimated to me to-day, by insinuations and charges are in circulation in this community, in relation to myself, to counsel on both sides, and the officers having this matter in charge, which, if true, would consign us all to the Penitentiary I wish to say to the Ladies and Gentlemen, to the men and women here, that if they would extend the same charity to us that they would expect, under similar circumstances, it would be a great deal more creditable to themselves and much more pleasing to us.

This emphatic rebuke of the Court was deserved, and it had a good effect.

We were employed, in behalf of the Court, to take full minutes of the evidence. It covers one hudnred and fifty pages of paper. A great desire is manifested to have it published. And we have about concluded to publish it in pamphlet from. It is too voluminous for our paper.

After the decision we will give our readers an abstract sketch of it.

We feel called upon to say here, that the Court-Commissioner, Mr. Buttrick, though young and inexperienced, presided over this lengthy and harrassing trial, with a dignity and ability eminently creditable to himself, and highly satisfactory to the parties interested.—Oshkosh Democrat.

Additional News by the Canada.

ENGLAND.—A meeting was held at Newcastle upon Tyne on the 30th ult. to take measures for raising a volunteer rifle corps, to repel invasion. The Royal Artillery at Woolwich were medically inspected on the 30th, and were to enter on a tour of field duty in a few days. The regiments quartered at the Portsmouth garrison had received orders to send out additional recruiting parties. Guns of larger calibre than those at present in use are to be mounted at Fort Angle-ea. The London Chronicle speaks lightly of fears expressed elsewhere of a French invasion.

FRANCE.—A despatch from Paris, dated 30th ult. says: The Minister of the Interior has sent a circular to the Prefects, directing them to set at liberty such political prisoners as can be liberated without danger to society. M. Erbangat, one of the Prefects of the University, has been called.

On the 29th, the President gave a grand ball to the English Minister, and expressed his regret at the prevalence of a belief in England of his warlike intentions. He had lived long enough in England to acquire high respect for the people, and he still had a great many friends there called.

The war at the Cape had made no advance since the last news, owing to the inclement weather. Nothing is said about peace. The Caffre Chiefs demanded independence, but Sir Harry Smith insists on the removal of the tribes to some country beyond the Key. In the meantime, the Caffres continue their depredations. Frequent skirmishes occur, and many are killed on both sides.

In merchandize, on Saturday, the markets were quite dull. Wheat was 3d. higher; Flour was 1s. higher than on that day week, with moderate sales.

The London Times says, that a principal feature of the new Reform Bill will be neither disfranchisement nor enfranchisement, but only a general enlargement of the constituencies.

George. "What is honorably, mother?"

Mother. "It means that you must give him the largest piece."

George. "Then, mother, I'd rather Charlie should be honorable."

DAILY SENTINEL.

Editorial Correspondence of the Albany Evening Journal

Letter from Mr. Weed.---No. 10.

AVIGNON, Jan 14, 1852

We looked to and Lyons eagerly on Monday Admittance is obtained to the Silk Manufactories for a consideration Some very rich Silks are being made to order for America But others still richer are going to Eastern Pashaws. It was here that the very magnificent robes for the Archbishop of Quebec, which we saw last Summer were made, and the Manufacturer confirms the statement of a Priest there, that they were the most costly ever made We looked, also at pieces memorable for blood and sufferings, first by the early Christians, and then in the Revolution of 1793, the latter under the auspices of monsters whose race, it is hoped, is extinct,

Lyons is in the vicinity of rich Coal mines. As our fires were supplied with miserable wood we asked for Coals. In reply, we learned that the business of supplying the City with Fuel, was a monopoly enjoyed by two Wood Dealers with whom the government shared profits.

The River Rhone being too low for navigation the Diligence Proprietors not unlike their brothers in our own country, took advantage of the circumstances to put up their Fare In a Steamer it would have cost us $16 to come to Avignon 150 miles Now we paid $10 This exasperated some People who were going but having learned, even before reading Tristam Shandy, that if gentlemen "will not lend you their Vostures to be broken to pieces for nothing and unless you pay 12 sous for greasing their wheels, how should the poor peasant get butter for his bread," we took things calmly

Diligences lumbering and clumsy as they look are agreeable and easy going vehicles. The three Ladies of our party were comfortably bestowed in the Coupe Five persons were packed along with me into the Interior while a large and miscellaneous party occupied the Rotunde The baggage, with any amount of merchandize, goes aloft When ready for starting, the Diligence to be drawn by five horses, two at the wheels and three abreast on the wheels weighs something less than a Locomotive The Roads over the Alps are excellent, so that even with this enormous weight, the Diligence moves off at a tolerable pace

There is a spur of the Alps reaching quite to Lyons and we passed, for most of the way to Avignon, through a broken country, presenting many varieties of scenery, some of which were very beautiful New Orleans where the Romans constructed an Arch of Triumph which still stands proudly erect, the Alps surrounded with snow, are distinctly visible It was here as you know from which the Family of Orange, that gave Sovereigns to Holland, England, &c, originated

The Country about Lyons is largely devoted to the culture of the Mulberry, a business into which we embarked, rather unprofitably, some years ago As we approached Avignon, passing through Pryvance we came into the Olive Orchards. The Tree grows best upon the hill side, where there is good exposure to the sun The Tree is small and scraggy, and is fruitful and barren alternate years The large Proprietors make the Oil themselves by placing the Olives in tubs of hot water, where they are pounded to a pumace, from which the virgin Oil comes to the surface and is skimmed off Then by compressing the pumace, an inferior Oil is produced

The Merchandize, Wines &c between Lyons and Marseilles, and the intermediate places, is transported on Trucks (two wheels not quite as large as that at Burden's Iron Works) drawn by three four, five, and six Mules, tandem, with a Donkey on the lead The harness which adorn the Mules' necks must have been invented soon after the flood before the establishment of Museums, or something like them would have been preserved in these armves of Ancient Art It would exhaust be impossible to "estimate the prejudices" of the French in favor of their own husbandry In the matter of Swine, for example, while their neighbors have improved the breed wonderfully, the French cherish that "lean kine" which Noah gathered into the Ark I saw droves of Hogs to-day with legs nearly or quite a foot and a half long In some instances, I really believe that the legs shout, ears and tail would out-weigh the body Perhaps this is because the French prefer Souse or want to display their science in cooking Pigs' Feet &c &c But me not, however, be understood as speaking irreverently of French culinary science, for which I have the most unqualified admiration In this science, we are as far behind France, as she is behind us in some other respects If nothing but economy was to be consulted, we should profit largely by establishing Culinary Schools in America, with French Professors But along with economy would come good eating Take for example, that indispensable vegetable, the Potato I have not seen one Boiled since we landed in France, and yet they were served on our table every day but variously cooked, and always delicious. The tops of Celtery, too, are cooked so as to flavor and garnish fish a dozen dishes Even the good Cooks confined to the principal Hotels and Cafes It is a Domestic attainment If any Traveller coming to Paris chooses to test our judgment in this matter let them take Apartments with Madame Joseph, No 65 Rue Neuve St Augustan, a few steps from the Place Vandome, the Roullevart Madaline, the Gargen of the Tuileries, and the Champs Elysee I will cheerfully pay for all the dinners they quarrel with Provence, through which we passed to day, was, apparently, very poor Every thing looked old and dilapidated. We saw but few Cattle and no Sheep There was every where an absence of domestic comfort. The People lacked the cheerfulness which belongs to the French character The Buildings are all of Stone, with apartments for Families and Horses under the same roof For full an hundred miles we encountered a piece of unwashed Women We did not see for hours, either in Villages or at Farm Houses, a Woman or Child with clean face or hands.

But as we approached Avignon, both the face of Nature and the faces of "Heaven's best gift" manifested a gratifying improvement, so much so, that it is not at all difficult to imagine that Laura's charms and virtues were worthy of Petrarch's muse and devotion On inquiring however, for Laura's Tomb we were informed that but a single stone of it remains.

Avignon is a most interesting Town Here the Romans made their mark, as indeed that wonderful People did wherever their Arms or their Priesthood established themselves for their structures were alike formidable and enduring Their numbers must have been legion, or they could not have accomplished such Architectural wonders Avignon, when the Church of Rome was divided rejoiced in a Papal Palace, from which as a Bridge over the River Rhone, now running with a Canal on the other side, to which in emergencies the Popes could escape through a subterranean passage Three Arches of this Bridge extending two-thirds across the River are perfect The Palace of the Pope is a majestic edifice in a good state of preservation occupied now as barracks for French Soldiers, and as a Prison for persons brought from the mountains, charged with political offences in the recent Revolution While we were viewing the Premises and Friends of the Prisoners came with provisions. It was painful to see Women and Children looking through dungeon grates at Husbands and Fathers Avignon contains 80 000 inhabitants and is entirely surrounded by a Roman Wall

We visited the Nunnery of the Black Penitents for the purpose of seeing what is esteemed the best Ivory Christ extant The ugliness and contention are most fearfully expressed It is the work of an Avignon Artist, whose Son had incurred the death penalty from the Inquisition, but whose life was saved by this exquisite piece of sculpture The half franks paid by all to whom it is shown, adds hand-omely to the Charity Fund of the Nunnery W

CADIZ SPAIN

I arrived here on the 3d inst (January,) after a pleasant passage I found here letters of the kindest tenor from Mr Barringer, our Minister at Madrid Mr. Burton our Consul here, has been exceedingly polite and attentive As yet the Minister writes me, he has no news from Washington but he doubts not that he will obtain my immediate liberation so soon as he can act officially in my behalf

On my arrival here every consideration was shown toward me Soldiers were sent off from the city to take two other fellow-prisoners of mine ashore But, for me, a separate boat was sent with two gentlemen, dressed in plain clothes, to accompany me. Instead of taking me at once to my prison, they led me over the city and showed me all the principal edifices, public walks, &c.

Here, in prison I have a large apartment to myself, and, when taken out from among the prisons 8, Gen Lopez's mulatto boy to wait on me I have the range of the whole building and have been able to improve in a great degree, the condition of the prisoners here They comprise all who are not Americans or English

While at Vigo all the Lopez prisoners, who were still there, came on board to see me The ship's decks were at one time full of them They gave me a very enthusiastic reception

The mail steamer from Havana has not yet arrived—she left on the 4th of December last, but to-morrow I hope to hear from home I am in good health

EXTENSIVE LAND SALE!
TWELVE FARMS.

THE subscribers will sell at Public Auction twelve Farms; and valuable tract of Timber Lands, situated in Rosen Town, Richland County, Wisconsin.

And also, their entire interest of Village Property, in blocks and lots, according to the plat of Richland City.

Also 34 of 120 acres of land, adjoining said village; the same being an undivided interest.

The sale to commence the

The terms of sales are, one-third cash at the time of making the deeds, one-third in one year, and one third in two years, with 12 ℘ cent. interest, payable annually; the amount of credit to be secured by Mortgages:

The said farms, described by divisions are:

No. 3, 160 acres, fenced and watered, 50 acres plowed, with house and barn.
No. 4, 240 acres, fenced and watered, 25 acres plowed.
No. 5, 160 acres, fenced and watered, 60 acres plowed, with house.
No. 6, 120 acres, fenced and watered.
No. 7, 160 do. do.
No. 8, 120 do. do.
No. 9, 120 do. do.
No. 10, 160 do., fenced and watered, 15 acres plowed, with house and barn.
No. 11, 155 acres, fenced and watered.
No. 12, 200 acres, fenced and watered, 20 acres plowed.
Also 160 acres timbered land.
Farms No. 4 and 5 have each an orchard of grafted apple trees, selections of choice varieties of fruit.

Said farms are mostly prairie with oak openings. Surface, diversified with plains and undulating. Remarkably well watered with spring branches, Bear Creek, and Pine and Wisconsin rivers. Soil, a mixture of sand, clay and loam, adapted to wheat, corn, barley, and all grains of the climate, and particularly for grazing. English grasses flourish and yield large crops. The extensive range of prairie and natural meadows, with an abundance of pure water, afford the most favorable opportunities for Dairy, Stock-Raising & Wool-Growing.

Said farms are situated from one to three miles from Richland City, (on the Wisconsin river,) in a section of country unsurpassed for healthfulness.

The Timbered Lands are situated on streams, and are situated along the Wisconsin and Pine rivers, and from one-half to two miles from the Village, where a favorable opportunity offers to drive the abundance of good sawing timber, the price of lumber, and the facilities for (when desired) to attend for a profitable investment in manufacturing lumber by steam power.

☞ Said Timbered Lands will be sold in tracts to suit purchasers. GARWOOD GREENE,
EBENEZER LANE.

Richland City, Wis., Jan. 2, 1852.

☞ Also will be sold at auction, after sale of the above lands, 6 yoke of Oxen and Steers, one pair of Horses, several good one horse Waggons, 2 set Double Harness, 20 head of Cows, Heifers and two-year-old Steers, a choice lot of Hogs, with four Plows, and a variety of farming tools; also $200 worth of hewn timber and lumber. Terms of sale, six months credit, with 12 ℘ cent. interest, to be secured. G. GREENE.

General Emigration and Foreign Exchange
AGENCY.

NEW-YORK:	LIVERPOOL:
W. & J. T. Tapscott & Co.,	W. Tapscott & Co.,
86 SOUTH ST.	37, GEORGE'S BUILDINGS.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1852.

As the season for emigration approaches, we beg to acquaint our friends and the public with our Arrangements for the year 1852, and would inform them, that with an increase of business—for which we are grateful—we are place d in possession of greater facilities for conducting the Emigration and Foreign Exchange Business than any other House in the World, and for which—in a great measure—we have to thank a discerning public for their continued patronage.

Since the commencement of last year a large number of magnificent ships have been added to the various popular lines for which we are the Agents, and several others are now in course of construction, all of which will be fitted up for passengers in the most superior manner, and commanded by men of long experience.

By the following List of Packets, and their dates of sailing—being six regular packets a month to and from Liverpool—four, to and from London—and two, to and from Glasgow—persons sending for their friends, or those proceeding to the "Old Country," will perceive it much to their advantage to make arrangements at our office; and as heretofore, our business in Liverpool will be under the personal superintendence of our Mr. W. TAPSCOTT—whose well known care and attention to passengers embarking by our line has won for him his present high reputation among the emigrating public.

LIVERPOOL PACKETS.

THE subscribers, thankful for past favors, beg leave to announce that they have recently added the Foundry business to their former occupation of Mill Stone manufacturing, and are now prepared to supply the public with castings in either branch, on terms that will defy competition.

In offering our stores to the community, we do so with the full assurance that we can supply better articles than can be purchased at any other place, being entirely new patterns, manufactured with care and from the very best materials. The following list of patterns is offered with the confidence that they will give satisfaction in every particular, viz:

THE ECONOMIST
DOUBLE OVEN COOKING STOVE,

Possesses great advantages over every other stove, for plain flues and direct application of heat, being so arranged that one or both ovens can be used at pleasure. It will cook in half the time of any other stove now in use, and with half the fuel, not consuming over four cords of wood in one year.

The TRIUMPH, single oven, takes in long wood, is an excellent stove—one that has been well tested, and given general satisfaction.

The PREMIUM is different in its construction from any other made, in the arrangement of the fire back—acknowledged to be a great improvement.

The JUNO PARLOR is adapted to either wood or coal, being decidedly the neatest arrangement ever offered to the public, having all the convenience of the stove combined with the beauties of the open grate. It is beautifully ornamented, highly finished, and perfect in every respect—the entire front above and below the grate being opened or closed with three doors, and so arranged that when open they are entirely out of sight. It is equally adapted to offices as well as parlors.

The RADIATOR is the best coal stove ever got up as a register of heat.

Persons purchasing their stoves of us, in the event of any of the plates getting broke, can at all times be supplied with new ones, thus superseding the necessity of throwing away stoves, which many are daily compelled to do in buying Eastern ware.

Those who are in want of an articles in our line, will find it to their advantage to give us a call, before purchasing elsewhere, as we are confident that we can give satisfaction in all cases. City references given, where our stoves can be seen in operation. Stoves delivered and set up in any part of the city, free of charge. All orders promptly attended to.
